THE PATE DE FOIE GRAS.

HISTORY OF THIS DELICATE DISH SO POPULAR IN FRANCE

Death of Its Greatest Maker - How the Goose Livers are Made Fat - Apocryphal Story of Dumas - The Famous Fies of Strasbourg - Giving Them a Scent.

At Colmar, in Alsace, died in his 71st year a worthy bourgeois named Jean Mangold, who, in the opinion of all save some members of the medical profession, deserved well, not only of his own country, but of the whole world. Colmar, the antique Colmaria of the Romans, next to Strasbourg, is unsurpassed for the fabrication of "pates de foie gras." The friends of the late M. Mangold, indeed, who was for many years the leading pastry cook at Colmar, claim that his pies were even superior to those made at Strasbourg. M. Mangold was a poet to boot, and composed a large number of local songs, satires, couplets and songs for music. But it will be with his pies, and not with his poems in his hand that he will probably go down to posterity.

It might be desirable in the outer world to stigmatize as wholly apocryphal the story to which Alexandre Dumas the elder, in his "Dictionnaire de Cuisine," has given currency, to the effect that the liver of the goose is fattened by the insertion of a small piece of fat, and that for pie making purposes the goose livers should be ten or twelve times the normal size, the author of "The Goose" goes on to say that the wretched livers are maled by their web feet to boards, that their eyes are put out, and that they are necessarily stuffed with pounded nuts and deprived of water.

STUFFING THE LIVE BIRDS. Another alarmer, improving on Alexandre Dumas, asserts that the maled down geese are placed, before a raging fire, and allowed to roast until their skin is like, thus leading to enlargement of the liver. As a matter of fact, the birds, like capons and turkeys, are no doubt systematically fattened by the insertion of a small piece of fat, and there is no more truth in the wild stories of the maled down geese than there is in the story of the maled down geese.

At Strasbourg, the construction of a pate is a serious and even solemn affair. Six fattened livers are the ordinary portion for a pie; they must first be washed in many waters and then parboiled, and are next scrupulously cleaned, so as to free them from all fibrous substance, and from any matter approaching bitterness in flavor. Each liver is then cut in two, and, out of the dozen, three are chosen to be broken in a mortar and passed through a sieve with bacon, shallots, parsley and mushrooms, so as to make a "farce," or forcemeat, which is boiled, and forms the base of the pie.

Half livers are then larded with the finest Perigord truffles, and in the shape of dice, and the contents of the pie are made to consist of livers of liver, truffles and forcemeat. Two hours are sufficient to bake this dainty dish, fit to be set before a whole congress of kings and emperors.

When the pie is withdrawn from the oven, the liver is cut in two, and the truffles are lifted and a large glass of Madeira poured into the interior. Then it should be hermetically closed, so as to be fit to eat at once, and the pie is then taken to the uttermost ends of the earth.

It remains, however, to show how these famous pies came to be made at Strasbourg and Colmar at all. Only 100 years have elapsed since the French military governor of the province of Alsace, Marshal de Contades, brought with him to Strasbourg as cook a Norman named Robert. At once, as we have already remarked for it "terrible" of fat goose livers, which were preserved in earthen pipkins with a layer of clarified butter under the cover. They were somewhat richly larded, and lacked the one supreme necessity. The artistic class practically exclaimed, "Pipkin, thou shalt become a pie!" He discarded the earthen pipkin, and the liver was put in a basket of pie-crust. "The body is there," continued the enthusiastic chef, "we must now give it a soul!" and he found a spiritual element for his pie in the cooking perfume of a Burgundy gordonnet. Close, the Norman, must assuredly be considered as the inventor of the Strasbourg pie. - London Daily News.

YOUNG MAN, BE HONEST.

Uncle Jonas Catches His Brisk Young Nephew Imitating Him.

"I am on the turf now," said a flashy, black-eyed young man, still in his teens, to an acquaintance whom he met at the Gutenberg races. I am out for money, and everything goes."

"When did you quit your uncle's book shop?" asked the boy's acquaintance.

"Last week," said the boy. He fired me out for trying to work one of his own games. One of the funniest rackets you ever heard of, and I'm just so much on the old man to give it dead away. The old man was going up Center street one day last summer, and he stopped in a second hand tool shop to see a friend. While he was there he got monkeying with a second hand signal box. It was a little cast-iron thing with the word "police" on the front and a brass button on the top.

When he pressed this button it set a lot of clockwork going in the box, and made as much noise as an alarm clock. He was stuck on the thing and bought it for a half. I asked him what he was going to do with it, and he said he would stick it up on the wall and ring it if any toughs tried to make trouble in the shop. Well, that's just what he did with it. He screwed it up in plain sight behind the counter and fastened wires to it to make it look as if they went somewhere. Then he took some bronze paint and touched up the letters so that nobody could make any mistake in reading them. I don't believe he thought of what a great graft the box was until he had it up about a week. Then he made it useful for the first time. A young fellow came in with a newspaper and wanted five cases on it. Uncle Jonas held the coat up and sized it up with the fellow that was trying to buy it. The coat was big enough for two like him, and the old man said: "Dot's a nice coat. Real in your own."

"Dot's a nice coat. Real in your own?" "Dot's a nice coat. Real in your own?"

"Dot's a nice coat. Real in your own?" "Dot's a nice coat. Real in your own?"

The St. Louis Flour Mills Shut Down in Accordance with the Milwaukee Agreement.

St. Louis, Jan. 2. - When the announcement was made on "Change this morning" that the four mills of St. Louis, with one exception, and a number of mills in this section of the country had shut down, and that none of them would run more than half time during the month of January a sensation was created. The only one that is running is Kaufmann's Anchor Mill, and it is only running half time. The news was telegraphed to Chicago and the effect of it was to break wheat three cents. Chicago has heard that this is coming but thought that St. Louis millers were only crying "wolf" again and paid no attention to it. When the confirmation of the report reached there the traders began to unload and the market to drop.

The closing of the mills is only the carrying out of the agreement made at the Millers' Convention at Milwaukee last month. The extreme scarcity of the market prompted them to enter into an agreement not to run more than half time during January, and they are living up to the agreement.

Mr. John W. Kaufmann was asked if it was true that his was the only mill in the city that was running, and he said: "Yes, I believe that they are all shut down but our Anchor Mill runs only one-half time. We had an order for one thousand barrels for January delivery, and we are making that."

"What is the cause of the dullness of the market?" was asked.

"Over production. There is a very large stock in the country, and no export demand. We can not export because we are a shilling above the foreign market. As long as that price continues, we must keep our stock, and it is too much for the domestic demand. If wheat comes down to an export basis the mills will start up again, but not until then."

Mr. Alex. Smith, secretary of the Milwaukee Association, said: "The closing of the mills is in accordance with the Milwaukee agreement. Two hundred and fifty winter wheat mills have signed written agreements, and I can get cash and wheat are coming in every day. The capacity of these mills is seventy-four thousand barrels a day. You may say that all the mills in St. Louis have shut down, but the Anchor Mill is still running, and it is only making one order, which isn't a drop in the bucket compared with the aggregate output of all the mills."

Richard Perry, in talking about the dullness of the market, said: "Every year the flour trade becomes very dull during the first two weeks of January. People are all out of cash, and the flour is bought. Even if the preceding sixty days have been active, the first part of January will be dull, but this year the situation is worse than usual. The last thirty days have been dull, and the depression began when Hutchinson's corner in Chicago broke. The buyers abroad had been scared. They thought there would be famine and famine prices, and they bought everything they could get for cash and future delivery. Prices went to the top and then began their decline. Like every one else who is caught, the foreign buyer felt that he had no profit on what they bought then, and they want to get rid of every barrel of it before they buy any more. The stock in the South is pretty well cleaned up. In the East they still have full stock, but there, the stock is twenty-five thousand barrels less than last year, it is still large enough to be more than sufficient to meet the demand."

It will be remembered that when the millers returned from Milwaukee they expressed great satisfaction with the convention, and one of the causes for satisfaction was that none but millers were there. The result of that is a prediction that what they said was true; that none but millers were there, and that they settled down to business and soon reached an agreement which they could and would keep."

The St. Louis prices have been low for some time and the latest quotations give a fair reason for the action of the millers. Wonders of the Dead Sea.
One of the most interesting lakes or inland seas in the world is the Dead Sea, which has no visible outlet. It is not mere fable that has clothed the dead sea in gloom. The desolate shores, with scarcely a green thing in sight, and scattered over with black stones and ragged driftwood, form a fitting frame for the dark, sluggish waters, covered with a perpetual mist and breaking in slow, heavy, sepulchral tones upon the beach. It seems as if the smoke of the wicked cities was yet ascending up to heaven, and as if the souls of their fearful sorrow would never leave that God forsaken valley.

It is a strange thing to see those waves, not dancing and sparkling like the sun as other waters do, but moving with measured melancholy, and sending to the ear, as they break languidly upon the rock, only a dull, heavy, and oppressive sound. The water is so hot, and the heat of the water, a fact well known, and which we amply verified in the usual way, for, on attempting to swim, we went floating about like empty casks. This experiment was more satisfactory in its progress than in its results, which were a very unbecoming skin and a profuse stinging of every nerve, so that we had been beaten with nettles. Nor does the water we took into our mouth a whit less vile than the most nauseous draught of the apothecary.

That fish cannot live in this strong solution of brimstone and salt is too obvious to need proof. But to say that birds cannot live on it, and live in it, is a case of exaggeration of travelers, who perhaps were not, like ourselves, so fortunate as to see a flock of ducks reposing on the water in the upper part of the Dead Sea. It is true that in those earlier ages men died for faith, principle, ideas, but so do they die for love in this age. Every day throughout the world men are taking living leaps to death because of their fidelity to ideas. The poor victim who last week leaped on the railroad track in front of the rapidly moving train and flung two little children from it, but lost his own death under the maddening wheels of the ponderous machine, died because of his idea of duty. It was not his duty to fling away his own life for that of others, but he thought it was, and he did it. Self sacrifice, unselfishness, the highest and noblest sort, is not of any particular age, but of all ages. The spirit of compromise is the spirit of selfishness, and it is not an exclusive growth of the present time.

Indeed, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find any other period of the world's history in which the spirit of charity, of good will toward men, was more ardent or active than it is today. It is not only in this country, but in all countries, that benevolent flows in a steady stream from the rich to the poor. The land is thick with great charities. We need not look about any great city like this to recognize how strong and broad and deep the stream of charity is. It is epitomized in scores of institutions kept alive at a most enormous cost for the helping of those who need

The "Turned Around" Mystery.
One of the amazing things of life is what is known as being "turned around"—that is, confused as to the points of direction. It is a thing that nearly every one has experienced. It is a thing that is much more vexatious in some cases than in others. A friend of the writer has described his experience. "The only way," he says, "I have been thoroughly and persistently astray in this matter is Poughkeepsie, which I have had occasion to visit a few times in the course of my life. Everybody has heard of the center who, in an impassioned moment, exclaimed: 'I know no north, no south, no east, no west.' Well, his condition was greatly to be envied by the man who thinks that west is east and north is south, and who cannot rid his mind of the idea.

The first time I went to Poughkeepsie, some fifteen years ago, it was fairly impressed on my mind that the city was on the west bank of the Hudson and that the principal street, which runs directly back from the river, went in a direction exactly west. Passing Poughkeepsie on one of the river steamers, I am well aware that it was the east side, but my notions of direction are all awry. I am even in doubt when the main centers the river, whether it is going north or south, and if I left myself I should probably take the train bound for Albany when I wanted to go to New York.

The other night I had to wait half an hour for a train there, and during the interval I made desperate efforts to set my mind right. On the newspaper in my hand I drew a mental map of the Hudson, and then, starting with the assured fact that Poughkeepsie is on the east bank, I tried to convince myself of the true state of things. But my mind refused to stay convinced. As I think of Poughkeepsie now, Main street, as you go up it from the river, runs just west. I wish some one could explain this phenomenon to me. One part of my mental make up knows positively which direction is north and which is south, as well as Poughkeepsie as clearly as the other part and the one which is controlling refuses to accept this knowledge. Why is it? Where is the philosopher who can explain it?"—New York Tribune.

She Painted Her Lips.

A very funny accident happened at a reception where bright women, who were out for the first time after a long illness, were the victims. Just before she left home some one said that she had better put on her lipstick on her lips as she looked perfectly blue. A servant in the shape of a charming girl volunteered her mixture, one of carmine and glycerine (which, if any is to be had, is the best), and she painted her lips with it. The result was that the girl's lips were painted a deep red, and she looked like a clown. The incident was a great laugh to all present.

Buying Historical Characters.

An incident of Gen. Sheridan's visit to Europe during the Franco-Prussian war is omitted from his history in the November issue of the facts, through ignorance of the facts. When the general reached Berlin he asked the American minister to recommend him a German fluent, to act as an interpreter. The minister recommended Mr. Charles F. MacLean, better known as a New York actor, who could speak German fluently, to act as an interpreter. The general, through the kindness of the minister, was introduced to Mr. MacLean, who was then a young American, who could speak German fluently, to act as an interpreter. ### Look Out for the Buzz Saw.

A folded sheet from newspaper limitation, designed for those proving and dishonest persons who steal papers that do not belong to them, is an invention that will be liked with delight by all honest newspapermen. The paper contains a rat trap attachment and a buzz saw, which is worked by concealed machinery, and is set to go off at a certain hour. A tramp or dishonest person passing on the newspaper sets the trap in motion; the rat trap catches the tramp, and the buzz saw cuts off the hand of the tramp, and the saw goes in its own work with the most discouraging effect on the kleptomaniac. —San Francisco Argonaut.

Why It Went Out.

"Keep your seats, please, ladies and gentlemen," said a theatrical manager, "there is no trouble whatever, but for some inexplicable reason the gas went out."

Then a boy shouted from the gallery: "Perhaps it didn't like the play." —New York Sun.
